To Ms Kath Thorne

Thornbury needs to grow - or where will Thornbury's grandchildren live?

Geographically it sits nicely between north Bristol and Dursley, and should be a key town in South Gloucestershire along with Yate and Kingswood.

Originally Morton Way was a link road not a boundary. It will be important that the type of housing be carefully chosen, and open recreational spaces created, to maintain Thornbury's character.

However the strategic plan does nothing to address the need for employment in Thornbury. This must be addressed if the population is to grow, and the need for commuting is to be reduced.

I am a life long resident of Thornbury, and run a family business in the town centre.

Yours sincerely

Adrian M Savery.
